THE AMERICAN WAY

Honor at Stake

by Morton
Clausen

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Morton Clausen was for many years editor and publisher of the Hamilton (Illinois) Press.)

A nation's honor is its most precious possession. It is the basis upon which it builds world prestige, and upon which it may wield world power.

Finland is a case in point. In its international relations we find the highest code of honor expressed both in the material and in the moral. At a time when Russia refuses to return some 600 U. S. vessels she was granted the use of under a loose lend-lease agreement, little Finland is struggling to pay the debt of a few millions, refusing to accept any monetary gift from the United States.

What makes one nation honorable and another dishonorable? Here we must go to the people of a country for the answer. In Finland the people are free. In that freedom they exercise the virtue of honor in their dealings with each other. A Finn's word is as good as a written and documented contract.

Thus the man—a honor commands respect with impact upon its national leaders in their international dealings, and the world terms Finland an honorable nation.

In Russia the people are enslaved. Enslavement forces the individual to resort to certain "expedients" of behavior not prescribed by codes of honor. Every act is merely a means to an end. Crime in Russia is on the increase with the top Russian national leaders leading the parade. The world today accuses Russia of a dishonorable nation.

The United States has an impeccable record of honor among nations of the world. From our earliest days to struggling young nation we have insisted on honest, courageous dealing with individuals in a free society where each person assumes full responsibility for his actions.

It is this personal knowledge of honor being seriously threatened today that so long ago 60 promising young men were discharged from our military academy at West Point for having broken the Honor code of that institution.

The incident which should have教了 the nation caused instead a hue and cry against the West Point system. Everywhere people were heard saying: "After all these young men are merely reflecting the times and conditions under which we live. From basic to the highest offices in the government we are the code of honor broken, and who punishes a few young men because of infractions that seem to be the order of the day?"

How wise it has proven for us to take such a stand. The truth more often is a failure because the men themselves are merely reflecting the times and conditions under which we live. From basic to the highest offices in the government we are the code of honor broken, and who punishes a few young men because of infractions that seem to be the order of the day?"

How Far Does Love Reach?

THE foundation of the teachings of Christ Jesus, as well as the motivation of his works, was divine Love. Wherever human government has attained its highest expression in freedom and equality there Christian faith in God and fervent belief in the brotherhood of man have been the greatest impulse.

God is Love, and man as His likeness reflects God. An imperfect image implies an imperfect original. But for the all-powerful creator to fall short of His own abilities is unthinkable. Hence immortal man, the manifestation of infinite Love, must ever measure up to the perfection of Love's standard.

The carnal mind, however, seems to include many qualities which fall far short of the divine ideal. Its misconceptions — for they are nothing more — are the source of all the strife, insecurity, and inharmony among the nations. Hatred, selfishness, intolerance — these are opposites of Love and can have no reality in Love's universe. Human experience is cleansed of them by the understanding of the spiritual perfection of man.

In the proportion that we, as individuals, reflect more of the quality of Spirit, God, do we bring the kingdom of heaven into our human experience. We can all be more loving. To love God and our fellow man is a divine requirement. The Master said (John 13:35), "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

The love which the Father gives is not limited or personal. It is forever available in its infinite fullness to every one of His children. There are no superior races, no favored nationalities; obedience to Him is the only criterion by which He measures men. And since man was created to fulfill the divine purposes of Love there is, in Spirit, no disobedient man.

Any appearance to the contrary in human experience is a falsity of mortal mind, a part of the dream of material life, an error of human judgment.

The reflection of infinite Love is not confined to affection between persons or among friends.

It is an overflowing goodness which reaches out to the darkest corners of human misery. It is not contained within national boundaries, nor restricted by continental barriers. It is not appalled by mortal aggressiveness, nor is it disconcerted by human ignorance.

In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes (p. 13), "Love is impartial and universal in its adaptation and bestowals."

A man was once walking toward a bridge in a large city. He was lonely, despairing, heartbroken. It was his intention when he reached the middle of the bridge to leap from it to the river below. As he stumbled along, head down, shoulders drooping, a little child darted away from her playmates and ran up to him. Placing her tiny hand in his, she smiled up at him and said, "I love you, man." Then she dashed away again.

The man walked across the bridge and down the other side into a new hope, a new life, a new success. In his heart had been kindled a glow which was to light his path through all the years ahead. A multitude of good deeds in his own life and in the lives of those he helped were to stem from that simple, unaffected, loving act on the part of the child.

Who can tell how far a loving thought may reach out to weary minds and struggling souls? Who knows what harvests of good may come from some loving deed? The Apostle Paul, speaking of his own mission, said (1 Corinthians 3:9), "I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase." Our task is to sow, God will provide the harvest. — The Christian Monitor.

"No, thanks,
... I'm driving"

Smart man!

He keeps his car in safe driving condition... and he keeps himself in condition to drive it safely.

Are you one of those drivers who honestly believe that a drink or two can have no effect on your driving ability? The fact is that just one or two drinks is enough to make an otherwise safe driver a very real danger to himself and others.

The records are full of statistics proving that drinking drivers are three or four times more likely to have an accident than those who do not drink. You may be far from drunk—you may not even feel your drink—but the unavoidable

"Much of the misery caused by drinking drivers is due to the men and women who "Wouldn't think of driving when I'm drunk." To these thousands there is no danger in driving after one or two, or "a few" drinks. It is they, not the stumbling drunk, who kill and cripple. Call it "dope," "feeling good," or "drunk." It really doesn't matter. What does matter is that your reaction, your perception, your attitude are all changed after one or two drinks."
